Economic Crisis Information

In 2012, the foundation continued the Responsive Grantmaking Program and will make an estimated $35 million in new grants focused on eight priorities: diversity in the health professions, environmental health, healthy aging, mental health, teenage pregnancy prevention, violence prevention, women's health, and work and health. It will also continue its special projects fund emphasizing funding for the health care safety net. The majority of these grants will again be for core operating support and capacity building to nonprofits that serve primarily ethnic minority populations. TCWF has prioritized three areas of funding with regard to the passage of the Affordable Care Act: 1) sustaining the health care safety net; 2) increasing the health care workforce and its diversity; and 3) supporting advocacy and public policy efforts to inform underserved populations, policymakers and opinion leaders about the new law.

Background

Established in 1992 in CA; converted from Health Net HMO.

Limitations

Giving limited to CA; national organizations providing programs in CA are also considered.

No support for activities that exclusively benefit the members of religious or sectarian organizations.

No grants to individuals (except for TCWF awards), or for annual fund drives, building campaigns, major equipment, or for biomedical research.

Purpose and Activities

The foundation's mission is to improve the health of the people of California by making grants for health promotion, wellness education and disease prevention. The foundation pursues the following goals through grantmaking: 1) to address the particular health needs of traditionally underserved populations, including low-income individuals, people of color, youth and residents of rural areas; 2) to support and strengthen nonprofit organizations that seek to improve the health of underserved populations; 3) to recognize and encourage leaders who are working to increase health and wellness within their communities; and 4) to inform policy makers and opinion leaders about important wellness and health care issues.

Program Area(s)

The grantmaker has identified the following area(s) of interest:

Diversity in the Health Professions

Grants that address the issue of diversity in the health professions are commonly given to organizations that provide pipeline programs, scholarships, outreach and retention programs, internships, fellowships and loan repayment programs for ethnic minorities that are underrepresented in the health professions. Careers in medicine, nursing, public health and other allied health professions are included. Organizations that support leadership development for people of color in the health professions are also eligible for funding. In addition, the foundation funds organizations that provide information about the California health care workforce and its diversity to policymakers and opinion leaders.

Environmental Health

Grants that address the issue of environmental health are commonly given to organizations that provide environmental health education and awareness activities, community organizing to promote environmental health; screening and testing for exposure to environmental toxins; leadership development; and collaborations such as partnerships between public health departments and community-based health programs to improve environmental health. The foundation also funds efforts to inform policymakers and opinion leaders about improving environmental health issues.

Healthy Aging

Grants that address the issue of healthy aging are commonly given to organizations that provide clinical preventive services, falls prevention programs, food and nutrition programs, and in-home support. Also funded are organizations that support relationships between youth and older adults through activities such as intergenerational volunteering and mentoring. In addition, the foundation funds agencies that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about healthy aging, as well as organizations that provide leadership development programs for seniors.

Mental Health

Grants that address the issue of mental health are commonly given to organizations that provide services for transition-age youth (ages 16-23) -- with a focus on those in, or exiting from, foster care and on runaway/homeless youth. In addition, the foundation funds organizations that provide leadership development programs for mental health professionals, as well as organizations that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the health/mental health issues of youth exiting from foster care and runaway/homeless youth.

Special Projects

Each year, the foundation sets aside a pool of dollars to respond in a timely fashion to opportunities that fit its mission, but are outside the health issues prioritized for funding. The foundation places an emphasis on grants to support and strengthen safety net providers of health care, to help low-income consumers understand and navigate the health care system, and to inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the health care issues affecting the underserved. The Foundation has also provided significant funding to organizations addressing the health care needs of the California-Mexico border population, the oral health care needs of underserved populations, and culturally appropriate programs for underserved ethnic minority populations.

Teenage Pregnancy Prevention

Grants that address the issue of teenage pregnancy prevention are commonly given to nonprofit organizations that provide outreach activities for reproductive health care, access to contraceptive services, and comprehensive programs for pregnant and/or parenting teens. An emphasis is placed on funding peer-provider clinics and other reproductive health organizations that work with high-risk, sexually active, underserved teen populations. The foundation also funds organizations that provide leadership development activities for reproductive health care workers and organizations that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the issue of teen pregnancy.

Violence Prevention

Grants that address the issue of violence prevention are commonly given to organizations that provide services for youth, (ages 12-24) including mentoring programs, gang intervention programs, re-entry programs, community-based violence prevention programs and after-school programs. An emphasis is placed on funding organizations that work with at-risk youth, including gang-affiliated and previously incarcerated youth. Grants are also made to organizations that provide leadership development activities to those working in the field of violence prevention, as well as organizations that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the public health aspects of violence against youth.

Women's Health

Grants that address the issue of women's health are commonly given to organizations that provide reproductive health care, prenatal care, community-based comprehensive health care services, HIV/AIDS programs for women of color, case management, and supportive housing for homeless women. Priority is given to organizations that create welcoming environments for women in underserved communities. The foundation also funds organizations that provide leadership development activities for women and those that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the issue of women's health.

Work and Health

Grants that address the issue of work and health are commonly given to organizations that provide health care services to farmworkers, in-home health workers, garment workers, day laborers and other low-income workers. Worker centers that provide culturally sensitive and linguistically appropriate services such as health education and access to health care for low-wage workers are also prioritized for funding. In addition, the foundation funds organizations that provide leadership development programs for low-wage workers, as well as organizations that inform policymakers and opinion leaders about the issue of work and health.

Purpose and Activities

The foundation seeks to build a better America by offering constructive assistance to people in need, thereby helping them to lead more rewarding, responsible lives.

Program Area(s)

The grantmaker has identified the following area(s) of interest:

Small Grant Program

The primary purpose of the program is to increase access to funding and strengthen the capacity of small, community based, and developing organizations. Therefore, priority is given to organizations with operating budgets under $1 million (excluding the San Diego County Small Grant Program where we prioritize budgets under $1.5 million). The program also supports small capital projects for organizations of any size (excluding the San Diego County Small Grant Program where priority is given solely to organizations with operating budgets under $1.5 million). Priority is given to organizations providing services in the following seven Southern California counties: Los Angeles; Orange; Riverside; San Bernardino; San Diego; Santa Barbara; and Ventura. Maximum grant award is $25,000 for a 12-month period. However, it should be noted that average grant awards range between $10,000 and $15,000. In addition, the foundation will not generally fund an entire project budget. Generally, requests from organizations with less than three years operating history in the Southern California region will not be considered at this time. For more grant information and the online application see foundation web site.
